BRIGGS WILL FIGHT

The Learned Professor Not Subdued Yet.

HIS APPEAL TO THE PRESBYTERIES

Church Members Urged to Stand by the Majority.

The Honor and Safety of Presbyterianism at Stake—General Assemblies Live for a Day, But Presbyteries Are Permanent—Prof. Briggs' Hope Lies in the Next Meeting at Saratoga.

New York, June 7.—The first accepted expression since he was suspended for "heresy," by the general assembly of the Presbyterian church, is the letter which will be published by Dr. Briggs in tomorrow's New York Evangelist, a religious newspaper, which may be regarded as an organ of the Briggs wing of the Presbyterian church.

In his letter Dr. Briggs says no one should feel obliged to retire from the Presbyterian church on account of the decision of the last assembly. The letter appears in part as follows:

"A minority of the church has violated the constitution, has over-ridden the safeguards of Presbyterian law and precedent. The majority should rally and use every lawful method to undo the damage which has been done to the fair fame of Presbyterianism. Let no man be discouraged; let no one flinch from the struggle; let no one leave the ranks; let the bugle call resound from ocean to ocean, from the gulf to the great lakes; a call to arms to every man who loves the Presbyterian church and who wishes her the future to which her history and her present advantages entitle her. Let there be a rally in every presbytery of all who will stand by the constitution and law which have come down to us as a precious heritage from our forefathers. Let each Presbyterian whose overtures have been so rudely brushed aside and scrufully treated, assert his position with greater determination before the next general assembly. Let the synod of New York assert its constitutional rights against the general assembly which has so greatly encroached upon them. Let every presbytery and synod which would maintain the graded system of courts, which has, until the present day, been the pride of Presbyterianism, overturn the next assembly in the interests of orderly procedure. Let constitutionalists in every presbytery take to their duty and overcome those minorities which have outvoted them during recent years, by scheming, planning and working together for a predetermined purpose. It is high time that all broad-minded men should organize and work together for their own safety as well as the honor of Presbyterianism.

"The Presbyterian church is a constitutional church, which has in its form of government a prescribed course of procedure for amendments to the definitions of its faith or laws. If a general assembly by a majority vote make new laws and new doctrines, it makes them unconstitutionally, a procedure which no minister or layman is under obligation to obey, but which he is under bonds to resist to the utmost, as illegal and revolutionary. Therefore no minister or layman should feel under any obligation to retire from the Presbyterian church on account of the illegal acts of the late general assembly. Every true Presbyterian should rather feel challenged to defend the constitution against those who have trampled it under foot.

"General assembly lives for a day and then passes away forever, sometimes leaving the fragrance of a good name and good deeds, at other times gaining a bad reputation for itself and for those who shared in its proceedings. The bad deeds of one general assembly may be rectified by the good deeds of another general assembly.

"The Presbyteries are permanent. They alone make law and doctrine for the Presbyterian church. Nothing can be permanent in Presbyterianism which two-thirds of the Presbyteries do not endorse. Therefore one, two or three general assemblies in succession may be on the down grade, but the presbyteries and the synods, so long as they maintain their rights and liberties, will save the church from any permanent injury. The acts of the assemblies at Detroit, Portland and Washington may all be blotted out by the sweetness and grace of the next general assembly at Saratoga. Let all loyal Presbyterians rally about Prof. Henry P. Smith in his battle for truth and right."

Mange as a Defensive Agent.

San Antonio, Tex., June 7.—At the annual meeting of the Texas Wool Growers' association held here to-day a resolution was passed recommending that as exhaustive experiments had demonstrated that the coyote, wolf and panther pests, which caused such heavy losses to the sheepmen of Texas, could be exterminated by propagating the disease known as the mange among them, mange pens for spreading the disease be established in every county in Texas. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: R. F. Halburt, of Sonora, president; Dr. J. B. Taylor, of San Antonio, vice-president; Max Mayer, secretary and treasurer.

EDWIN BOOTH DEAD.

America's Noted Tragedian Passes Away This Morning.

New York, June 7.—Edwin Booth died at 1:15 this morning. At 10 o'clock last night the nurse noticed a serious change for the worse, and immediately summoned the members of his family, and telephoned for Dr. Smith, who arrived at 10:30 o'clock. They remained in the room with Mr. Booth until his death at 1:15. In the room when the actor died were his daughter, Mrs. Grossmann, and her husband, Mr. Maconigle, Mr. Booth's brother-in-law, William Bespham, an intimate friend, and Charles Farryell. Edwin Booth was born in Belair, near Baltimore, Md., on November 13, 1833, and was the son of Junius Brutus Booth, the elder, an English actor, who made his reputation mainly in the United States.

The body will be buried on Friday evening in Mount Auburn cemetery, near Boston. The funeral services will be held in this city on that day at 9:30, at the Little Church around the Corner, Bishop Potter officiating. The pallbearers will be Joseph Jefferson, A. M. Palmer, ex-Judge Charles H. Daly, Parke Goodwin, Eastman Johnson, Horace Howard-Furness and Will Bisham. No one will be admitted to the church without card. The chief mourners will be Ignatius and Mrs. Grossman, their two children, Mr. and Mrs. Bisham, Mr. Grossman's brother and sister, and John Henry Magonigle and wife. Immediately after the services the funeral cortege will move to the Grand Central depot and the remains of the great actor will be taken to Boston. The body was embalmed this morning at the Players' Club. A cast of the dead man's face was taken by John H. A. Walthausen. He said that Booth's face was life-like in expression and looked as natural as when he had last seen the tragedian on the stage. The body will be buried in a massive plain oak casket; no flowers will be taken to church, nor placed upon the casket, except wreaths of flowers from Mrs. Grossman. It is expected that a large number of the dead actor's friends will accompany the body to Boston.

SEVERELY CONDEMNED.

The Cornwall Canal Scheme Excites Wide Disapproval.

Ottawa, June 7.—The United States consul here is gathering all the information he can in regard to the government project to dam Cornwall canal, as it is feared it will lead to perplexing troubles between Canada and the United States in regard to flooding lands in the States. This information he will forward to Washington as soon as collected. The late John Page and other engineers severely condemned the scheme.

Columbian Liberty Bell.

Troy, N. Y., June 7.—All the arrangements have been completed for the casting of the great Columbian liberty bell. It had been intended that the event should take place at 4 o'clock this afternoon, but a telephone message from the McNeely bell foundry says that it may be postponed until to-morrow to allow the attendance of some of the members of the Columbian liberty bell committee, who are in session to-day in Independence Hall, Philadelphia.

Lost in Wind Cave.

Hot Springs, S. D., June 7.—Paul Johnstone, the mind reader, who went with a party of five into the big Wind Cave to find a pin that had been secreted by a member of the committee, is still in the cave. It is 48 hours since the party went in and there are the greatest fears for their safety, as they only expected to be gone 12 or 13 hours and did not have a very large supply of food. His manager, Rice, spent last night in the cave searching for the party but found nothing except the place where they had slept. A searching party has been organized to go after them.

Magazine Rifle for U. S. Troops.

Chicago, June 7.—The first meeting of the ordnance and fortification board ever held outside of the national capital, is in progress here to-day, with Gen. Schofield presiding. Among the important questions to be considered is that of a new magazine small arm, and the point will be decided whether the United States army shall be equipped with a modern magazine rifle of American or foreign invention. Gen. Schofield has had under consideration for a week the report of a special committee which considered this question, and which decided adversely to all the American weapons tested. It now rests with the present meeting to determine whether the ordnance bureau shall proceed with the manufacture of the Krag-Jorgensen gun, the foreign weapon adopted by the board before congress passed the act requiring a further test of the American inventions. Secretary Lamont's decision will finally settle the matter, but he will be largely governed by the views of the board.

Republican Demonstration.

Columbus, O., June 7.—The Republican state convention was called to order this afternoon at the Grand opera house. The ground floor was completely filled by the delegates, while the balcony and upper gallery, which were reserved for the general public, were equally crowded. Gen. Charles H. Grosvenor, who represents the Sherman wing of the party in this state, was selected as temporary chairman, and after his address and the appointment of the usual committees an adjournment was taken. The convention is little more than a love feast, as the delegates are a unit in favor of the renomination of Governor William McKinley, Jr., and the entire state ticket, with the possible exception of Food and Dairy Commissioner McNell. The latter has made himself somewhat unpopular with business men by reason of his stringent enforcement of the laws relative to poor food, and this unpopularity has made itself felt in the selection of delegates. He is a candidate for renomination, however, and his friends propose to make a fight. The other state officers to be renominated are A. L. Harris, lieutenant-governor; E.W. Poe, auditor; W. T. Cope, treasurer; J. K. Richards, attorney-general; M. J. Williams, judge of the supreme court; C. E. Grace, member of the board of public works; O. T. Carson, commissioner of schools.

South American Troubles.

Valparaiso, June 7.—News has been received of the arrival in Rio Grande do Sul city of reinforcements for the government troops. These troops were hurried forward when word was received by the government that the revolutionists were preparing to resume the fighting. In Puerto Alegre, the meeting place of the revolutionist sympathizers has been torn down and several persons injured.

Canada in the Arbitration.

Paris, June 7.—Ex-Attorney-General Sir Richard Webster concluded his address before the Behring Sea tribunal today in behalf of the British case. He expressed surprise at the statement made yesterday by Hon. E. J. Phelps, of the American counsel, to the effect that validity of seizures made or to be made in Behring Sea was not submitted to the tribunal under the treaty of arbitration. C. Robinson, of the Canadian bar, followed Sir Richard Webster in behalf of Great Britain. Mr. Robinson declared that it was impossible to place the American claims on any legal basis.

The Derbys Say Goodbye.

Toronto, June 7.—The Governor-General and Lady Derby arrived here this morning. They will hold a reception at the government house this afternoon and say good-bye to friends. The city council will present them with a farewell address.

Bray Arrested.

San Jose, Cal., June 7.—F. W. Bray, charged with throwing his wife from a cliff in San Francisco recently, and who has been missing since, has been arrested in this city. Bray says his wife threw herself from the cliff in an attempt at suicide.

U. S. Government Enquiry Into the Matter.

The Princess of Wales Once More Appears in Public—Destructive Fire in San Francisco, With Loss of Life—The Conflagration Now Under Control—Bishop Potter's New Honors.

New Orleans, June 7.—Reparation, pecuniary and by apology, has been asked of the department of state by the British ambassador at Washington for the action of the captain of night inspectors in New Orleans on May 2nd in arresting first mate R. E. Maile of the steamship Nigria and locking him up in a city jail. The customs officer had detailed a night inspector to watch the Nigria, and the movements of this inspector in walking about on the deck of the vessel kept her officers awake and First Mate Maile protested. When the captain of the night inspectors came along the ship's officer renewed his objections to the action of the inspector, and he had some heated words with Captain Morgan, commander of the night force, whereupon the latter arrested him, took him forcibly off the ship and placed him in one of the precinct jails, where he remained all night.

The case is complicated by the fact that upon the preliminary examination of Maile the United States commissioner decided that he had committed no offense, and discharged him from custody, thus making a case of pure false imprisonment. The resident British consul was informed of the case, and he in turn laid an exhaustive report of the matter before Sir Julian Pauncefote, upon which the latter has based a demand for an apology and financial indemnity to Mr. Maile.

Special Agent Link of the treasury department is here investigating the case for the government, and nothing will be done until his report is forwarded.

Laid by the Prince.

London, June 7.—The memorial stone of the new wing of the Royal United Service Institution, better known to the public as the Chapel Royal, Whitehall, was laid to-day by the Prince of Wales, who was assisted by Prince Edward, of Saxe-Weimar and Prince Adolphus, of Teck. The Duke of York and the Princess May were also present. The streets in the vicinity were packed, and the heir apparent received a hearty welcome. The grand lodge of Masons also participated in the ceremony. Immediately after the exercises the prince opened a naval and military costume bazaar under the patronage of the Queen in aid of the building fund. The Princess of Wales accompanied the Prince on the occasion of the laying of the foundation stone, it being her first appearance since the death of her son, the Duke of Clarence, eighteen months ago. The wing of the building, of which the corner stone was laid to-day, will serve the purpose of a museum of ancient weapons.

Honor for Bishop Potter.

Quebec, June 7.—Bishop Henry C. Potter, of the diocese of New York, was to-day honored at a special convocation with the honorary degree of D.C.L., from Bishops College of Lennoxville. This morning Bishop Potter delivered a special sermon at a service held to celebrate the centennial of the founding of the diocese of Quebec.

Firemen Killed.

San Francisco, June 7.—Fire broke out at 3:45 this morning on Page street, between Baker and Lyon streets in the western portion of the city. One block was destroyed. At this hour, 4:45, the fire is beyond control. Two firemen were instantly killed by falling walls.

Later.—The fire which broke out in a barn on Lion street near Page at 3:30 this morning destroyed a dozen fine residences, most of which were of recent construction. The fire was not got under control until 5:30. Three firemen, named Windrow, Davis and Madison, were instantly killed by the falling of a chimney. Another named Henry was badly burned. Loss $200,000. For a time San Francisco was in danger of a widespread conflagration, which fortunately was averted through the medium of a schoolhouse. A building adjoining the barn on the north side, and the small shoe factory of Lobestein Bros., in the rear, took fire at once, and all three places were quickly a mass of flames. While these buildings were being consumed the fire spread across to the east side of Lion street, igniting the fine three-story residence of M. E. Rountree, on the corner, and also spread to the building adjoining on Page street and on the other side of Lyon street. At this time appearances indicated a serious fire and a general alarm was given. The entire fire department responded to the alarm and the scene became a highly animated one. A row of five two-story houses adjoining the Rountree place were on fire, and it spread from one to the other with remarkable rapidity. About 4:30, when the fire burned most fiercely, and the firemen were seemingly engaged in a hopeless fight, a brick chimney in one of those houses fell with a deafening noise and buried in its ruins three firemen, who were playing on the rear. The men all belonged to engine 13. Windrow leaves four young children, and Davis and Madison each a wife and two children. The other firemen went to the assistance of their companions, and the work of extricating them began at once, but the victims were taken out dead. They were taken to the morgue.

Flames from the row adjoining Rountree's home leaped across Page street, enveloping the home of H. Finn. This, like the others, was soon razed. From here the flames again jumped across the street, quickly reducing two other houses to ashes. Sparks were carried by the high wind which prevailed to the large school house in the middle of the block on Page between Baker and Broderick streets, setting fire to the cupola. This blaze was soon extinguished. If the school house had gone the fire would have been widespread. The department had almost more than they could do, the flames spreading along the north side of Page street, burning two buildings to the ground and damaging another.

CANADA AND THE STATES

Some Resolutions Passed at the Reciprocity Meeting.

SPEECHES BY MANY LEADING MEN

President Hill of the Northern's Ideas—Dr. Orton on the Situation—Great Mass Meeting Last Night—Election of Officers.

St. Paul, Min., June 6.—This morning when Chairman Eustis called the convention to order, Hon. Joseph Martin, a former member of the Manitoba parliament, was called to the platform and introduced to the convention.

The committee on permanent organization reported; James Fisher, M.P., of Winnipeg, for chairman; P. K. Kelly, of St. Paul, vice-chairman; Dr. J. McGinnis, of Grand Forks, secretary; J. H. Beck, of St. Paul, S. A. Thompson, of Duluth, and C. N. Bell, of Winnipeg, associate secretaries.

Mr. Fisher returned thanks for the honor conferred, but, in view of his speech yesterday, would make no extended remarks, save to say that he believed that good and nothing but good could arise from such conventions. He hoped that the movement would so extend that before long conventions would be held in the eastern cities. This convention simply hoped to be a factor in bringing about a satisfactory reciprocity treaty between the two countries.

Secretary McGinnis read letters of regret from Hon. Wilfrid Laurier, the Canadian Liberal leader, Hon. Thos. W. Greenway, premier of Manitoba, and Capt. Alexander McDougall, of Duluth.

E. V. Smally, chairman of the committee on resolutions, reviewed the report of that committee and spoke briefly in its support, explaining the reciprocity movement and its means of strength and of weakness in both countries.

The resolutions cover only the subjects of reciprocity, deep water ways and transportation, and were as follows:

"That in the opinion of this convention the policy unanimously approved by the first international reciprocity convention at Grand Forks, is now reaffirmed, of removing the tariff restrictions upon our international boundary as far as can be done consistently with a due regard to the revenue requirements and other interests of the two nations, and may be most advantageously carried into effect by a treaty providing for the free interchange of these classes of the products—both natural and industrial—of each one that are generally in demand or usually find the readiest sale in the markets of the other. Such a policy in the circumstances of the United States and Canada is capable of being applied to many classes of industrial products as well as to natural products generally. It would result in giving to Canada a market now denied it for much of its produce, with compensating advantage to the United States, and that without affecting a large part of their respective customs revenues.

That cheaper transportation is a matter of prime importance to the interest of the Northwest—Canadian and American—favoring the improvement of existing waterways and the construction of additional channels of communication between the great lakes and the ocean of sufficient capacity to allow a free passage of ocean vessels, which should be free of all tolls.

That any reciprocity treaty between the United States and Canada should provide for the free and common use by the people of both countries of all the canals now built or hereafter to be built to facilitate commerce between the great lakes and the ocean, and should also provide for free and open competition between the railway systems of the two countries, in order to reduce the cost of transportation from the interior to the seaboard to the lowest figure consistent with the efficiency and reasonable prosperity of the roads.

That in order to secure the desired results sought to be obtained by this convention, a joint committee will be appointed by the permanent chairman of the convention, consisting of ten members, five of them to be selected from the Dominion of Canada and five of them from the United States; that it shall be the duty of this committee to take charge and prosecute this work after the adjournment of the convention, by using such measures as they may deem proper to bring the matter before the Dominion parliament and the Canadian authorities and before the congress of the United States and the American authorities, and before the people of the two countries.

Hon. Joseph Martin was then called upon, and talked for some time in support of reciprocity, expressing the belief that the people of both countries would allow no politics to interfere with the natural view of the situation, which he held to be reciprocity in natural products, and also in many manufactures. Cheaper transportation to the seaboard was almost as important a question for the Canadian Northwest, which is at the mercy of a railway system. He deprecated all attempts to choke the reciprocity movement by asserting that the government is disloyal to Canada, and charged the great railway that made such assertions with that very disloyalty, in that it secures control of American railways and American outlets for itself while ordering others to keep their hands off.

Wm. M. Springer, of Illinois, chairman of the ways and means committee of the national house of representatives, was introduced, and expressed himself in favor of reciprocity with all the states on the American continent. As we are nearest Canada, he said, our first efforts should be turned in that direction. The people are substantially of the same race, language and interests, and almost of the same country. We are not to aid, abet, or suggest anything in the form of Canadian government, and the connection between Canada and Great Britain need not and cannot interfere with the proper reciprocal trade relations. We desire more intimate trade relations for our mutual benefit. People do not transact business for their health, but for the benefit of those who are concerned in all the transactions. He hoped it would not be necessary for such conventions to meet many years more, for the signs of the times indicated the early solution of the question of reciprocal trade relations. Such a period would build up both countries, and would be an era of lasting peace and prosperity.

A recess was then taken.

When Chairman Fisher called the convention to order at five minutes before 3 o'clock, President James J. Hill, of the Great Northern Railway, was introduced. After a few remarks on the composition of the convention, Mr. Hill said that, as he understood it, the object of the convention was to bring about the free interchange of commercial commodities and of transportation facilities on both sides of the international boundary. If the customs houses along the border were abolished it would make a new geography, commercially speaking, of the continent on both sides of the boundary. The people are engaged in practically the same occupation. He saw no reason why the commerce which now secures an outlet at Baltimore and Boston and New York should not be divided with Montreal. The improvement of the great continental waterways in his belief would probably make Montreal the largest shipping port on the continent.

That would let farmers live and prosper. Low freights are necessary for the development of the Canadian Northwest. In the United States the cheapest rates are in vogue. Canada has all the valuable metals, and when you ask for reciprocity, reflection will show that the situation is different from that of any other of the western hemisphere. If we had reciprocity Canada would be served. The Northwest would gain in transportation to the sea, provided deep channels are made through the waterways to the sea. An arrangement agreed upon between the two countries would result in good to a portion of this country and all of Canada. He thought it well not to ask for so much that the people would feel that Canada was getting all the advantage. To ask for something that could be secured would serve as an entering wedge for more. The whole north of the United States would be benefited by freerer relations with Canada. If it were possible to build a ship canal to the Hudson it would never approach in effectiveness the natural highway by the lakes and the St. Lawrence, if the natural ways were improved.

Dr. Orton, a former member of the Canadian parliament, J. Hayne, of Minneapolis, and Mr. Hall, of Brandon, Man., spoke on the platform, and Mr. Thomson, of Duluth, spoke at length on deep waterways to the sea, on which he is one of the best posted men in the country. This last address was listened to with the closest attention and was followed by a brief discussion, after which the platform was formally and unanimously adopted.

In the evening a mass meeting was held in the Auditorium, which was almost filled with delegates and others, many of whom had been attracted by the presence of Mr. Springer, chairman of the ways and means committee of the last house of representatives, who delivered the chief address of the session. Mr. Springer was greeted with hearty applause, and in opening disclaimed any intention of speaking for others than himself; saying that what he should advocate would simply represent the views which he entertained as one individual, which could not be construed as a policy which would be pursued by congress or the Democratic party. Whatver policy the party will adopt will be determined when congress meets and after consultation with all the representatives and of the people of the states and the general government. In the course of his remarks Mr. Springer said that no citizen of our republic would, for a moment, consent to the establishment of any restriction whatever upon trade between the various states of the union. If this trade had been so beneficial, what reason could be given, what argument could be offered in favor of continuing this trade among the American states which would not apply to the trade between the States and the Dominion of Canada? He thought that the same freedom of trade should exist between Canada and the United States. Continuing, he said that restricted trade between the Dominion and the United States had been brought about by the individual selfishness of special interests, each supposing that with the aid of the government they might get some advantage over the other, neither having regard for the welfare of all the people, irrespective of country. What was needed at this time was intelligent debate, discussion in conventions of this kind, arguments in the public press and a more unselfish and patriotic devotion to the favored classes. Mr. Springer favored conferring upon the President of the United States the authority to appoint an international commission on the part of the United States to treat with a like commission appointed by the Dominion of Canada for the purpose of submitting to the respective governments a treaty of reciprocity embodying as far as possible a free exchange of the products of the two countries.

The officers who will serve for the year are as follows: President, James R. Fisher, Winnipeg; vice-president, A. H. Burke, Fargo; Frederick Driscoll, St. Paul; Capt. J. C. Rene, Minneapolis; F. Winsor, West Superior; F. M. Strobart, Winnipeg; D. F. Burke, Port Arthur; Chas. Braithwaire, Portage la Prairie; secretaries, Dr. R. McGinnis, Grand Forks, S. A. Thompson, Duluth, C. N. Bell, Winnipeg, J. H. Beck, St. Paul.

His Fee Ten Thousand Dollars.

London, June 6.—In the Commons tonight, replying to a query, the Chancellor of the Exchequer stated that Attorney-General Sir Charles Russell received $10,000 for six weeks' services before the Behring Sea tribunal. Williams, a Liberal-Unionist, gave notice of a motion to reduce the amount.

Costs in the Briggs Case.

Washington City, June 6.—It is generally agreed among Presbyterians prominently connected with the Briggs case, that the expenses incurred during the entire progress of the case, from the initiatory stage until the general assembly disposed of it last week, amounted to a large sum, but it is almost impossible to make an estimate of the total amount with accuracy. Some light is thrown on this subject, however, by Rev. Dr. Bartlett, who was chairman of the local committee of arrangements for the general assembly. Dr. Bartlett says the board bill alone of the 200 commissioners of the assembly, which number the local committee promised to provide for, amounted to $900 a day, and therefore the two days' trial of Dr. Briggs in this city cost the local committee $1800. There were more than 800 delegates to the assembly, and while the trial consumed, properly speaking, only two days, the case really extended over more than double that period, so $13,000 is nearer the mark than $1800. Dr. Bartlett is of opinion that the estimate made by some of the commissioners that the Briggs case from beginning to end cost the general assembly about $50,000, is nearly correct. Col. McCook, of the prosecuting committee, is a wealthy man and spent out of his own pocket, according to Dr. Barlett's opinion, at least $20,000.

Murder in Chinatown.

Los Angeles, June 6.—A horrible murder was committed in Chinatown this morning. Quan Ah Mon, a highbinder, ran a dirk, eight inches long, through How Ah, a Chinese prostitute, and shot Wing Ah Sip twice through the lungs. The woman is dead and the man is not expected to live many hours. How Ah was the property of Tom Bing. Quan Ah Mon was in her company last night. At 5:45 this morning she was heard to scream for assistance. Wong Ah Sip, a member of the Wong Chee Company, and a docile Chinaman, went to the door of the place whence the screams emanated. He pushed it open and saw Quan Ah Mon in the act of pulling a knife from the body of the woman. When Quan Ah Mon saw Wong Ah Sip he fired two revolver shots at him. One shot went through the lungs and the breast. Immediately after the firing Quan Ah Mon disappeared and has not been found since, although the police have searched diligently. The woman lived until 9:45. Wong Ah Sip is slowly sinking. There is great excitement in Chinatown, and there are prospects of more bloodshed.

Bad Drinking Water.

Travellers suffer greatly from the different kinds of water they are compelled to drink, as nothing is so likely to bring on an attack of diarrhea as change of drinking water. Perry Davis' Pain-Killer is the only safe, quick, and sure cure for diarrhea, cramps, and cholera morbus, and the valise of every traveller should contain a bottle of the mixture, which he can procure at any reputable drug store. 25c for a large bottle.

THE PEGLEG MINE.

Reported Discovery of the Famous California Ledge of Gold.

San Diego, June 1.—An old prospector living in this city has just returned from an extended trip to the desert, and is positive that he has found the lost Pegleg mine. If not, he has property, he claims, of equal richness, and the name will not make much difference in the value of the bullion.

The history of the famous Pegleg mine is well known to any person who has been a resident of California for any length of time, and the failure of many expeditions to locate it has caused the story to be believed to be a myth, and the very existence of Pegleg himself is doubted.

The prospector referred to is John Ingram, aged 63, and his wife is a woman of 53. The couple are pioneers of Southern California, and Mrs. Ingram remembers having seen Pegleg in Los Angeles. After his death she met a French doctor who cared for Pegleg in his last hours, and from him secured a good general idea of the location of the mysterious bonanza.

Mr. and Mrs. Ingram made several ineffectual trips to the desert, and finally decided to make one more thorough search, and, if unsuccessful, then to give it up. They outfitted for a long trip, and they had it, having been away, all told, three and a half years, nearly all of which time was spent on the desert. They were provided with a stout, double spring wagon, canvas-covered, and made a thorough search of the entire eastern portion of San Diego county, from the Cocopah country to the San Bernardino county line and from the Colorado river to the Coast mountains.

Mrs. Ingram talks Spanish fluently, and, after months spent in gaining information among the Indians in the eastern part of the county, decided that the mine lay to the west. Indians who are familiar with every rock and brush knew nothing of it, but said white men had searched for it in that locality. Disappointed and discouraged, the old couple turned their horses' heads to the west and began the toilsome journey homeward across the sands.

The old man will not tell just where he received the first authentic clue, but from a conversation with him it was learned he must have been nearing the range of mountains on the west of the desert when he came across an Indian, sick, and nearly dead from thirst. He picked him up, put him in his wagon and nursed him, and in the course of a day or two the Indian had nearly recovered.

Ingram says they were camped near the base of a mountain, which he estimates to be from 7000 to 9000 feet high. In conversation in Spanish with the Indian, Mrs. Ingram told him they were looking for the Pegleg mine. The Indian knew nothing of Pegleg Smith, but said there was "mucho oro" (much gold) on the side of the mountain, and if that was what they were seeking he would guide them to it. The old man said he looked up the mountain, and what the Indian said were bodies of ore appeared to him to be nothing but dykes of black country rock, and refused to make the toilsome ascent. His wife, however, took careful note of the surroundings, and the more she looked the more she was convinced that the locality was that described by Pegleg's French doctor. She at once informed the Indian that she would accompany him, and the two made the ascent.

In continuing the story of the find the old man said: "I laughed at my wife for making the climb, but when she got back in the course of an hour or so with a lot of rock in her apron the laugh was on me, and I tell you I wasn't long in shinning up that mountain with a pick.

"I broke off a lot of the rock, and, coming back to camp, horned it out, and the way the colors streamed out was a caution. Colors! Why, the rock just streamed with colors! I should judge the ledge is from three to four feet wide, and the farther I picked into it the richer it seemed.

"No miner would go to that mountain to prospect. The whole country is burned up, and the big dikes through which the ledges run appear to be nothing but black country rock. Nobody could find gold there but a tenderfoot or a woman. But it only proves the old saying that gold is where you find it.

"We made a search around there and found two or three shallow prospect holes around the foot of the mountain, made years ago, but no signs of anyone having been there in recent years.

"I am not going to tell the exact location at present. We put up initial monuments for four locations and came into town to get our exact bearings and see if it is included in any mining district. We are going back in a day or two to put up all the monuments and legal notices. We expect to be back in about 12 days and then give more detailed information. There is plenty of water in springs thereabout, but it is a terrible, desolate looking country. I won't tell you which way we go beyond the fact that our way lies through Julian.

"We made a careful study of the surroundings, and comparing it carefully with the notes my wife has of the Pegleg location, we are positive we have found the long-lost mine."

Your correspondent carefully questioned the old gentleman, but he is shrewd, in fact foxy, and the location could not be ascertained beyond the fact that it is on the desert. The fact that he expects to make the round trip in 12 days, including putting up monuments, is evidence that the mine is located in the mountains to the west of the desert and about 90 or 100 miles somewhere to the east of this city.

Assays of the rock show 212 ounces of gold to the ton.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

A Legislative Melange Comprising Many Important Subjects.

London, June 6.—President H. H. Fowler of the local government board stated in reply to a question in the house of commons that the officers of the government would maintain a strict watch to prevent cholera from getting a foothold in Great Britain.

Mr. Gibson Bowles, Conservative of King's Lynn, asked whether reparation had been obtained for the seizure by the Russians of six British vessels on the high seas, in Behring Sea, in July, 1892.

Sir Edward Grey replied that Russia had referred the claims in question to a commission, which had not yet made a report on the subject. The present provisional agreement entered upon by Great Britain with Russia had been entered into expressly, without prejudice to the right of the British vessels seized by the Russians in Behring Sea in July, 1892.

Mr. J. C. Butcher, Conservative M. P. for York, moved to amend the Irish home rule bill in such a manner as to prevent the Irish legislature from enacting laws in reference to the crimes of conspiracy, combination, unlawful assembly, rioting and crimes against the person.

Irish Chief Secretary Morley said that nothing would be surer to promote friction between Great Britain and Ireland than the adoption of such an amendment.

Mr. Butcher's amendment was rejected by a vote of 317 to 276.

Sir Henry James, Liberal-Unionist, then offered a motion to the effect that among the powers reserved from the Irish legislature should be the power of dealing with sedition.

Home Secretary Asquith opposed the motion on the ground that there might be sedition against the Irish government, and therefore the Irish legislature ought to have power to deal with such sedition.

The amendment was rejected by a vote of 304 to 255.

The Radical members of the house of commons met in conference this evening to discuss the wearisome and futile protraction of the home rule debate. In committee, Henry Labouchere, Radical leader, spoke in favor of immediate and summary action to force the bill through the committee stage. The obstructionists, he said, had wasted weeks already in discussing and dividing on utterly useless and hopeless amendments. The time had come for ending the spectacle. The Unionist amendments were not intended seriously, and it was ridiculous to treat them as if they were offered in good faith, when everybody knew the contrary to be the case. Several other members spoke in favor of Mr. Labouchere's position, some of them expressing even more strongly their disapproval of the government's hesitation to shut off debate—the obstruction of the opposition.

Samuel Stoerey, member for Sunderland, who presided at the conference, defended the government's course. Those on the outside, he said, must realize that they did not have all the means of knowing Mr. Gladstone's motives, and that they would do better to let those best acquainted with the situation select their own methods for pushing forward the bill. Precipitate action on the part of the Radicals would result probably in embarrassing the premier.

Mr. Stoerey's advice had the effect of delaying final action until Friday, when the Radicals will meet again. Meantime pressure will be exerted in private to move Mr. Gladstone to decisive steps against the Unionist filibusters.

ANOTHER BABY SAVED!

Good News For Mothers.

"In June of last year, my doctor advised me to procure Lactated Food for my baby, who was at that time in such a condition that its life was despaired of. Previous to commencing with Lactated Food my baby had not been able to retain any food on its weak stomach, and was slowly dying. After using the Lactated Food for three or four days, I could see a favorable change; and, at the end of July my baby was out of danger. From the first feeding it seemed to like the Lactated Food, and to-day it is still using it, and is never sick. I thank you for your grand food, because it saved baby."

The above words are taken from the letter of a thankful mother residing in the city of Quebec. The mothers of Canada do not require any stronger proof of the value of Lactated Food as an article of diet for baby. No cholera infantum, no diarrhoea, no fatal summer sickness for baby when it is fed on this life-giving food. All druggists sell Lactated Food in three sizes, 25 cents, 50 cents and $1 per tin. The $1 size is sufficient for 100 meals, and is the most economical and most profitable size to buy.

THE RETIRING SEX.

Influence of Women in Conducting the World's Affairs.

Four highway women grace the police calendar this morning. A week or two ago a single member of the same sorosis won from the public press favorable notice of her prowess. The spirit of enterprise seems to be spreading among the sex whose designation of softer is a mockery of their victims. Yet it may be doubted whether robbery as a profession realy enlists a growing proportion of women. Much of their other activity may be delusive. It may be doubted whether the direct influence of women in the public conduct of the world's affairs has not diminished and is not diminishing. With the growth of democracy, it would seem that this conclusion must follow.

With the single exception of the brief military court of Napoleon, women molded—if they did not direct the policy of every court in Europe for 200 years. By the Napoleonic episode the headquarters of a camp was interjected for a few years into the sucession. Then the restoration of the crown restored the influence of women. The republic has put them out of court, so to speak, to a great extent. In the one constitutional country of Europe, England, the controlling power of women in public affairs declined only with the rise of the cabinet as a constitutional body during the reign of George III. In other words, with the gain of the people in power, women lose.

It is true that they come more and more in evidence in public affairs. This is only because the peoples become more and more in evidence, and women are a part of the people. But in place of six royal favorites or great dames controlling a monarch or swaying his ministers, we have 600 talking women who exercise no power at all, or next to none. Neither is this decay of direct influence confined to high politics. It will be found to run through many fields of female activity. More women now make a living on the press, for example; yet within a century there was never a time when the proportion of woman's contribution to the best current literature was less than now. Apparently they are contributing a slightly increased share in some lines of decorative art; outside of this there is difficulty in discovering any share of the world's work now falling to women's part larger than they bore through the centuries preceding our own—the 19th.

It is well. It is generally agreed that the ideal state should be that in which all women should be, first, independent; and second, withdrawn from life's drudgery. Both of those conditions exist in more liberal measure than either has been known before in this century. The numbers of women who have mastered arts whose products are merchantable, are great, and these are comparatively independent. The numbers who are provided for by the general increase of wealth have less temptation now to embroil their lives in public affairs, where their influence must be nearly nil. The woman movement of the past 50 years has been, first, that of regaining privileges which the preceding 50 had curtailed, and second, gaining for English-speaking women property rights which were once common to all of their sex under the civilized Roman law. With this growth of individual justice and personal freedom, women are progressively withdrawing more and more into their "sphere"—the only one, it is apparent, that they really care for.—New York Evening Sun.

Widest River of All.

Were it not for a decided difference in the color of the water you would never know when the Atlantic is left and the Rio de la Plata entered. The high-rolling, white-capped billows are the same and no land is visible—for the great river which Juan Diaz de Solis discovered is 125 miles wide at its mouth, though with an average depth of only fifty feet. Sebastian Cabot, who arrived in the year 1520, soon after the natives had murdered poor Don Solis, dubbed it River of Silver, not on account of its color, which might have won for it the more appropriate name of Golden River or River of Chocolate, but because he had wrested quantities of silver from the Indians who swarmed its banks, and naturally imagined that an abundance of precious metal remained in the vicinity. In point of fact, the terms of Argentina and Rio de la Plata (both meaning the same thing with reference to silver) are misnomers, for no metal of any sort, precious or otherwise, is found along the banks of the mighty stream, or anywhere near it, and the scanty argentiferous deposits in the hills of the interior have never been worked. The Indians aforesaid probably obtained the silver which so excited the cupidity of the Spaniards from Peru and Bolivia by some method of internal commerce known only to themselves. To this day metals do not figure in the exports of the adjacent countries—Uruguay, Paraguay and Argentina, but such prosaic articles as hides and tallow, horns, wool, preserved and refrigerated meats, extracts of beef, etc.—for their wealth lies solely in grazing facilities and fertile soil.

The Daily Times.

ON THE WRONG SCENT.

The News-Advertiser would have its readers believe that the Liberal party is not united "in its support of Mr. Laurier, his policy and his methods." As evidence of this it quotes two papers, the Huntingdon Gleaner and the Winnipeg Free Press, the first of which bases a condemnation of Mr. Laurier on the assumption that he is maintaining an alliance with Mercier, while the second strongly opposes the idea of unrestricted reciprocity. The Gleaner's opinions are quoted as representative of Ontario, though it is hard to see how a journal published in the Quebec Eastern Townships should be regarded as an interpreter of Ontario feeling. We suspect that our Vancouver contemporary has in this instance committed as egregious a geographical blunder as when it located C battery at Esquimalt. The News-Advertiser should really improve its knowledge of Canadian geography, and when that is done it might devote some time to the revision of its ideas on the relative importance of political indications. It is rather too absurd to allege that the Liberal party is disunited because two out of the many Liberal newspapers express disapproval of what they conceive to be features of the party's policy. In the case of the Gleaner, too, the disapproval is based on an entirely false assumption, because there is no alliance between Laurier and Mercier. The fact is that the Gleaner is a rabid Orange and Anti-French journal, whose Liberalism is quite subordinate to its religious and race prejudices. It cannot be taken as a representative exponent of public opinion even in its own limited field. The Free Press is a much more influential paper, but it delights in periodical attacks on the Liberals, though professing itself a Liberal at other times. And the disapproval of the Free Press, like that of the Gleaner, is founded on an incorrect assumption. The News-Advertiser must bring forth stronger evidence than the utterances of these two papers if it wishes its story of Liberal disunion to be even listened to. In the meantime it might profitably consider the position of its own party, with its leaders engaged in a distressful hunt for ways and means of satisfying the popular demand for a reform of policy without alienating the support of those who hold the political purse-strings. This pleasing occupation they vary by chasing Mr. McCarthy up and down the country and trying to counteract the harm this former ally is doing to their cause. It seems to us that Conservatives would be likely to reap more benefit from an attempt to heal their own party's sores than from puerile talk about "Liberal disunion."

A TYPICAL TORY JOB.

The deepening of the channel in the St. Lawrence at the Galops rapids seems to have been a typical Ottawa job. At the commencement the Government, then led by Sir John Macdonald, decided on improving the channel on the south side of the river, though it was emphatically told by pilots and forwarders that the north side should be chosen. The men asserted that a better channel could be thus secured at one-fifth of the cost of the south side improvement. The contract for deepening the south channel was secured by a Montreal dredging firm, who undertook to give it a uniform depth of 17 feet for a certain distance and with a certain width. The total cost of the work is about a million dollars. Something like a year ago the work was reported complete and the money was paid over, but it appears now that the million dollars have been practically thrown away. The Iroquois News, a Conservative paper, and Dr. Reid, the Conservative member for South Grenville, assert that the work was not done according to specifications, that dangerous rocks and shoals have been left in the channel, and that in fact the contractors were paid for work which they did not perform. It seems that in consequence of the protests of its own friends the Government sent Mr. Kennedy, the Montreal harbor engineer, to examine the channel, and that he made a report, but this report has never been allowed to see the light. Now the million dollar channel is there, but it is utterly useless because it is unsafe. Pilots will not undertake to navigate it, partly because the dredging had not been properly done and partly because the cross currents would render the channel unsafe even if the work had been executed as it should have been. All the barges are taken by the old route on the other side, which could have been made quite safe at a mere fraction of the expenditure. It is extremely pleasant to see the Ottawa incapables thus ready to squander a million dollars of the public money, while they profess to be unable to find the means of making improvements that are absolutely necessary.

The Winnipeg Commercial is jubilant over the success of a Winnipeg pork-packing firm in securing a contract for the supply of 170,000 lbs. of bacon to the Indian Department. This, it says, is the first time Manitoba bacon has been used by the department. Moralising a little further on this success the Commercial says: "Manitoba farmers should supply all the bacon required west of the lakes, which they do not yet do by a long ways. The mining development in the interior of British Columbia is creating a rapidly increasing demand for this class of goods, which should be supplied from Manitoba." We like to see our Manitoba neighbors "get on," but at the same time we should prefer to see British Columbia produce all the pork and similar food supplies its people need. The province is quite capable of doing so if its inhabitants were only alive to their opportunities.

Among the many pleasant things which have been said of the Times, the following from the Almonte Gazette—an excellent eastern Ontario weekly—is highly appreciated: "The Victoria (B. C.) Times, which has been a great success under the management of Mr. Wm. Templeman, formerly of the Gazette, has just taken a stride that places it at the head of the newspaper procession in the west. It has put in four of the celebrated Mergenthaler Linotype type-setting machines—marvels of mechanical ingenuity—and appears in a brand new dress every day. The Times is one of the brightest, cleanest, newsiest and best written papers in Canada—a model daily—and is the first paper in the Dominion west of Toronto to introduce the new system of type-setting. We trust friend Templeman's enterprise may receive the golden reward it deserves."

The Stratford Herald will have to be read out of the Conservative party for two reasons. It charges the chief Tory organ with flunkeyism and with talking "bosh," and it speaks disrespectfully of the Princess May wedding gift project. This is the Herald's contumacious utterance:

The esteemed Empire trusts that Toronto and every other Canadian city will be liberal in subscribing for wedding gifts to the Princess May, in view of her approaching marriage to Prince George. It is implied that this is necessary to show our "loyalty." We totally dissent from this, and so, we believe, will most of the inhabitants of Toronto and other Canadian cities. Canadians can and do wish the fair and worthy Princess all the happiness possible without the sending of the money out of the country which is needed here. There is more flunkeyism than anything else about the Empire's bosh that it is the duty of Canadians to subscribe toward such objects.

The report of the 16th annual meeting of the American Humane Association that was held in Philadelphia from the 26th to the 28th of October inclusive, shows that 4724 persons were, through the efforts of this society, prosecuted for cruelty to children; that 22,199 children were rescued from dens of infamy and homes of drunkenness and vice; that 88,817 animals were relieved, and 4297 persons were punished for crimes against dumb beasts. This is a record of which the association may well be proud, and it proves that such organizations are capable of vast service to the cause of humanity. There is room for much more of this sort of work in Canada than has yet been accomplished.

The Mail says the stream of European immigration has not turned towards the Northwest so far this year in so great a volume as was expected. There has been a lull in immigration affairs the world over. It adds: "The chief point to be arived at in inducing immigration to the Northwest is the cheapening of the cost of living and a reduction in the cost of production and transportation to the outside market." No wonder Conservatives are anxious to see the Mail amalgamated with the Empire when it thus persists in exposing the failure of the Conservative policy.

Says the London Advertiser: "The Empire reports that the 25 Methodist churches of the West Toronto district have suffered a decrease in the aggregate membership of 750, according to figures submitted at the late district meeting. A leading Toronto Methodist recently informed the writer that this loss is attributable to the exodus caused by lack of employment in the city and neighborhood." Where is the prosperity the N. P. was supposed to bring to Toronto?

The Age of the World.

Dr. Andrew Wilson, in his "Science Jottings" in the Illustrated London News, says: "The earth's age, like that of the proverbial spinster, must, I suppose, be deemed uncertain; or, at least (as in the case of the census paper), we must allow a fair margin for probabilities. The geologists, on the other hand, are supposed to make very big drafts indeed on the bank over which Father Time presides; while the physicists, on the other hand, insist on more moderate demands being formulated. The latest explorer in this field of enquiry is Mr. Clarence King, a well known American geologist, who seems to lean to the side of the physicists in this matter. Of course everybody starts with the earth as a gaseous mass, and everybody gets to the earth as a cooling globe, which is certain in time to become a burnt-out cinder like the moon. From researches on the effects of heat and pressure as applied to a cooling orb, Mr. King concludes that Lord Kelvin's estimate of the earth's age is very near the mark. According to Mr. King the age of our world is to be set down as not exceeding some 24 millions of years, which, I venture to say, is so entirely unthinkable a number that nobody may feel intellectually perturbed if a few millions more be added, or a few millions be subtracted from the amount.

The event was under the auspices of the Sons of the Revolution, which furnished the funds for the purpose, amounting to $15,000. The statue is 9 feet in height, stands on a handsome polished granite base facing Broadway. It represents Hale in the garb of a colonial schoolmaster of the revolutionary period, his head uncovered, his feet bound with cords and his hands pinioned behind him, just as Hale probably appeared on the morning of his execution.

When the girl's father heard of the affair he was very angry, and went to the school after dinner to wait for the teacher. When that gentleman made his appearance at the school gate, Paure made a rush at him, and excitedly exclaiming, "You'd strike my daughter, would you?" he began to deliver blow after blow on the undefended face of the school teacher, until he was compelled to desist by some schoolboys, who pulled him off and saved Fraser further punishment. The face of the latter was much disfigured, two black eyes and a torn mouth figuring conspicuously. He at once laid a complaint, and the case will be thoroughly ventilated in the police court. Mr. Paure, who is a well-known citizen, claims that his daughter has black and blue stripes as a result of the whipping administered by the teacher.

Judge Clarke's Vehemence.

Atlanta, Ga., June 7.—Peter Stocks, a nephew of the revivalist Sam Jones, charged with the murder of Alpheus Cassena, was put upon trial last week. The mother of one of the jurors dying, Judge Clark peremptorily declared a mistrial. To-day the case was called to go on before another jury, and Stocks entered a plea of "former jeopardy." Judge Clark in a very vehement manner overruled it, declaring that he lost his own mother when he was 49 years old and that it made him feel like an orphan. He would discharge a jury at any time, he said, in the presence of death, and did not care if all the lawyers in Christendom objected. The case will be appealed to the United States supreme court.

LONDON MARKET IS SOUND

Sealskins Will be High if the Catch is Not Too Heavy.

OUTCOME OF THE ARBITRATION

H. Moxon, a London Fur Broker, Chats on the Subject of the Sealing Industry—His Views on the Subject—Believes in Certain Restrictions.

Mr. H. Moxon, of the firm of Culverwell, Brooks lb Co., fur brokers of London, is in the city and is at the Union club. The firm is the largest in its line in the world. It handles a large portion of the Victoria catch of sealskins, and it is to take a look over the trade that Mr. Moxon is here. He was seen by a Times man this afternoon, and among other things said:

"If the catch of sealskins this season is no larger than that of last year prices will be very good. The feeling in London, the centre of the industry, is very sound, and has been for some time. But any heavier production would affect the market. To illustrate the feeling, I may state that contracts were made here early in the season at $15. I believe many of your sealing owners do not look upon the market properly. They seem to feel at times that an increase in prices should be followed by a movement of the same nature here. In that they are wrong, for it is an immutable law of every trade that any inflation must be followed by a contraction. There has been more or less talk of combinations at the London sales, but in my experience a combination there to control the market is impossible. In London we have been watching the arbitration very closely and great interest is manifested in it. I have no fear of the result, for the Americans have no case. They have nothing to stand upon at all. I believe, however, that cretain restrictions will be placed on sealing and that a zone will be established around the islands. They should go farther and stop the killing of seals on the islands. It is wrong, for it disturbs the seals, and their instincts will cause them to leave the islands and seek other places to bear their young. This I have sought to impress upon those interested in the industry and the international features of the question."

Mr. Moxon will be here for two weeks, in which time he will meet the Victorians engaged in the business. His firm handles all grades and kinds of furs, and he has therefore other matters to look upon besides taking a view of sealing matters here. He is thoroughly versed in the subject.

Hospital Directors' Meeting.

A meeting of the board of directors of the Jubilee Hospital will be held this evening. The regular monthly business will be transacted.

The rights of the militiamen to use the Clover Point range will most likely be restored to them. It is proposed to amend the by-law so that they may use the range for properly regulated practice. Robber's Spoils Recovered.

New York, June 7.—Stolen silverware and jewelry to the value of thousands were found this afternoon in a furnished room near Chatham square, part of the proceeds of many robberies committed by Frank Davis, who was arrested a week ago on Fifth avenue. Part of the recovered property consists of several antique watches and gold and diamond jewelry stolen from the house of Mrs. Bradley Martin on the night of April 20th last. The other articles were identified, and were stolen from wealthy residents of this city. A slip of paper bearing the names of many distinguished ladies throughout the country, whose houses the daring robber entered to loot, was in the collection of recovered spoils. Among the names were those of Mrs. Armour, Chicago; Mrs. Chas. Crocker and Mrs. Leland Stanford, San Francisco. Much of the stolen property has been broken up and sold for old gold and silver. According to the prisoner's story a considerable portion is pledged in pawn shops and will be recovered.

This road will give the Northern Pacific an entrance to Vancouver, and the Great Northern railway may also enter over the same tracks. It is intended to push forward the work as much as possible.

The above officers will be installed at the first meeting of the institute in July. A special meeting of the institute will be held on Thursday evening.

German Cooking Versus Chinese.

The stomach of a person of refined tastes must revolt at the mere idea that his dinner has been cooked by a Chinaman. Would you send for a Chinese doctor when sick? All the Chinese cooks have been dismissed from "The Vienna," Yates street, formerly "The Wilson," and Germans have taken their places, who give general satisfaction in this popular place. Mr. Charles Eissner, formerly with Delmonico, New York, is in charge of this handsomely furnished and conveniently situated restaurant, where meals may be obtained at all hours. Lunch is served from 12 to2 at 35 cents, and table d'hote dinner from 5:30 to 8 at 50 cents; with wine, 75 cents.

Goodwin's Funniest Play.

This evening at the Victoria Mr. Nat C. Goodwin will present his great success of last season, "The Nominee." This play is drawn upon entirely different lines from "A Gilded Fool," and by many of his most ardent admirers is considered the most laughable play in which he has ever appeared. Undoubtedly the male portion of his audience will appreciate the touch of human nature that pervades the piece. There will hardly be a man among them but has been guilty of little subterfuges to cover up shortcomings in certain respects, some time during his married life. As Jack Medford, "the nominee," or, rather, alleged nominee, Mr. Nat Goodwin has a part which shows off his laughter-provoking abilities admirably. "The Nominee" will be preceded by a curtain-raiser entitled 'Art and Nature," formed around a love episode in the life of an actress. The part of the actress affords Miss Amber opportunity for some very clever acting. Mr. Wilson plays the part of a provincial lawyer with fine humorous conception. The piece is dressed in last century style, affording a good contrast to what follows.

"The Nominee," being an unusually long play, will have to be commenced early. The curtain will therefore be raised at 8.10 sharp, without fail.

Her left hip was fractured and her right foot was badly lacerated. She was taken to the Jubilee hospital. She will recover.

PLAYERS OF RENOWN.

Nat Goodwin and His Company Please a Large Audience at the Victoria.

The Victoria Theatre should have been packed to the doors last night, for the finest and cleanest legitimate comedy-drama ever seen in the city was presented by Nat Goodwin and an excellent company of players. "A Gilded Fool" is a comedy, inexpressibly funny all through and sufficiently dramatic to claim attention and relieve the humor. Its strongest recommendation is that the usual stage climaxes are absent.

Nat Goodwin is a natural comedian. He has simply to come upon the stage and sit, stand or walk without uttering a word and it is provocative of mirth. Somewhat like the late Sydney Smith, who could not ask a lady at dinner for another potato without the dear creature going off in a giggle and simpering, "oh, Mr. Smith, you're so funny." In the part of the "Gilded Fool," who finally becomes thoroughly sensible, Mr. Goodwin is in his element. Last night he won his audience completely with his delicate humor and his skilfully handled pathos. C. E. Holt, who played Bannister Strange, the "Napoleon of Finance," who reached out and led, is a finished actor. He looked and acted his part to perfection. Mabel Amber as Margaret Ruthven was capital. She is a handsome, graceful woman. T. D. Frawley, who played the part of Jack Duval, was very good, too, as were Miss Dupree as Nell Ruthven, R. G. Wilson as Matthew Ruthven, and Theo. Babcock as "Rev." Jacob Howell, Miss Mortimer, Jean Clara Walters, and J. R. Armory. In fact the whole company are excellent.

In the first and third acts last evening Victorians saw the best dressed stage it has ever been their privilege to behold. To-night Mr. Goodwin's old piece, 'The Nominee," which is too funny for description, will be played. A brilliant little curtain raiser, "Art and Nature," will precede. Every seat should be occupied, for there is only one Nat Goodwin, and he is here.

Divisional Court.

The Divisional Court did not sit to hear the appeal in Cluverwell, Brooks & Co. vs. Penny, there being only one judge in the city.

Warrant Out for York.

Christopher York, declared a "vag" in police court this morning, will shortly be arrested if he has not gone out of town. Sergt. Walker and Constable Redgrave swore that York had not done a stroke of work for six months, and that he was in the habit of begging meals and drinks around town. York did not appear and a bench warrant was issued for him.

Three Months for Biting.

John H. Roberts, colored, cook at the Telegraph Hotel, Store street, pleaded guilty in police court this morning to biting a piece of flesh from the left ear of George Arthur Brain, waiter. Roberts in extenuation pleaded that Brain attempted to stab him with a knife. The court said that there was no excuse for such a brutal act, and sentenced Roberts to three months' imprisonment.

Party of Visiting Officials.

James Woolery, sheriff of King county, Washington; James Wells, one of his deputies, and Thomas Gordon, county clerk of King county, are all in the city and are guests at the Driard. They are enjoying a few days' vacation and are seeing the sights of Victoria. They are all old, popular and efficient officials of Seattle and are well known throughout the state. They were shown the city and provincial bastiles to-day by Chief Sheppard.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Manager.

Mr. James B. Giffen, who has been in the service of R. G. Dun & Co. in Winnipeg and Toronto for a number of years, has succeeded Mr. C. F. Jones as manager of the Victoria agency. Mr. Jones has been very ill for ten weeks, but will remain in the service of R. G. Dun & Co. in a southern city. Mr. Giffen comes to Victoria recommended by the business men of Toronto as especially qualified for the responsible position which he has assumed.

Good Work of the Quadra.

The Dominion steamer Quadra has been lately engaged replacing the buoys marking the shoal off Sidney South Spit, Gossip Reef, at the east entrance to Active Pass, and Spanish Bank, Burrard Inlet. All the buoys in the Gulf are now in their proper positions. The Quadra will be engaged next week building a stone beacon on Kelp Reef, the material for which is now being taken on board. The beacon will be a great improvement on the buoy which at present marks this extensive and dangerous shoal.

A Lively Rooster.

J. H. Brownlee feels like offering a reward to some one who will bring a game rooster out to his home at Mount Tolmie and give his prize bantam a good drubbing. Some time ago he took to fancy breeds of poultry, and raised among others a fine bantam rooster. Yesterday Mr. Rooster got out of his coop and took to celebrating. He killed 10 fine half-grown chickens, chased all the other poultry off the place, and then attacked a young calf. The bantam will be kept cooped until some one who wants him badly enough comes along and buys him.

A Permanent Theatrical Attraction.

Mr. Mark Drumm, the well-known theatrical man who represents the Richard E. French stock company, was seen by a Times reporter to-day with reference to the probability of his bringing that excellent organization to British Columbia. He said that if sufficient inducement was offered by the theatre managers and passenger agents of the different transportation lines he would arrange to play Victoria, Nanaimo and Vancouver one night each week for a lengthy engagement, but that it would not serve the financial interests of the concern to any advantage to play but one or two of the towns, as the French stock company is one of the best in existence at the present time. It is to be hoped that the necessary inducements will be forthcoming.

THE LUCKY CHEROKEES.

Their Position Made Enviable by the U. S. Government.

In all this broad country, writes a correspondent from Tahlequah, I. T., to the Philadelphia Telegraph, there is not a man so much to be envied as the Cherokee. Uncle Sam has made him rich for all time to come. If he has a care in the world it is not apparent on the surface. He is not so highly civilized that it becomes oppressive to sustain the strain. He knows nothing of high or low tariff, and the money question has been reduced to a discussion of the government annuity. There are only two questions upon which he feels deeply, and these are the distribution of the money which will make the nation rich and the preservation of the nation's sovereignty. The life of the Cherokee Indian will be ideal if the American nation does not force him from his present territory, and his white brother rob him of the money which justly belongs to him. Since the beginning of this century the Cherokees have owned the most valuable lands of the south and southwest. In all, their possessions by the various grants from the government aggregate 81,000,000 acres. Now they have been reduced to less than 5,000,000 acres. By the sale of the Cherokee outlet the last dollar which will ever come to the nation by the relinquishment of lands will be received, and until the white has absorbed the Indian blood the Cherokees will continue to live as a tribe and own the land in common. This is the fight which the nation henceforth must make and as a people they are thoroughly alive to the situation. It was in order to preserve their individuality that Principal Chief Harris and the national council took the initiative in calling a general council of the five friendly tribes. The Cherokee alone does not feel able to make the fight for the perpetuity of his title and his race. It must be the common concern of all, and if the Indian has a friend it will be within the next decade that he must come forward to show it. The law against intruders must be enforced to the letter, and the territory which remains must be jealously guarded. In the complete sovereignty which the five tribes now enjoy there is absolute safety save from the common tendency to intermarry with the whites. There are not less than 12,000 full-blood Cherokees out of a total population in the nation of 28,000. The whites who are here as citizens will have an abundant opportunity for acquiring wealth, and the mixture of Cherokee and white blood makes a thrifty people.

But with the distribution of a sum of money almost equal to that which the United States government paid for the Louisiana purchase comes the turning point in the nation's history as it exists, to-day, and every citizen of the nation, be he white, full-blood, half-breed, or negro, recognizes the necessity for building a high wall about the small territory which remains. If the nation opposes the introduction of railways, and frowns upon those who come to establish new religions and introduce new customs, those conversant with the conditions existing will not find fault. These only mean the first step toward an influx of outsiders, and a progression which is forced by the outside world means ultimate bankruptcy and annihilation. Left to themselves, the civilizing influences already at work will bring all these things in good time. There are fine schools and academies, and the people are far from illiterate. Tahlequah, old and quaint, had educated and refined people when the capital site of Kansas was a pasture ground for the buffaloes. There were only a few of these families, to be sure, but now the nation is filled with homes which have educated people in them. And all these people now ask is to be let alone. They recognize their helplessness, and it is the earnest wish of every man of intelligence in the nation to make such a show of progress that the Congress of the United States will assist them.

There are only three established churches in the nation, these are Methodist, Baptist and Presbyterian. The Cherokee is not burdened with an ultra-religious sentiment, and the enthusiasm is largely confined to the female population. He is too easy going in his way, the climate is too soft and nature has done too much for him to give his religion any intensity, but the moral standard is high for all that. And if anything more is done in the way of conversion it will come through these three churches. Catholics and Episcopalians have been barred, and the other denominations will find the field already covered. There are no labials in the Cherokee language, and to this unfortunate fact the Episcopalians can attribute their exclusion from the nation. It was all due to a Methodist interpreter, but the indications are that the church lost through it its last opportunity for a foothold. Some 20 or 30 years ago there was an Episcopalian evangelist who desired to establish a mission at Tahlequah. Before any aliens can come into the nation it is necessary for many forms to be observed, and the evangelist was compelled to explain his belief and object in coming to an interpreter, who in turn was to inform the council. The word Episcopal cannot be pronounced in the Cherokee language, and the interpreter gravely informed the council that it was a "church without a name." It was the opinion of the wise men that a church which had done any good or could do any would have been given a name, and the clergyman was told that he could not teach his doctrine in the nation. The Catholics were excluded because of the prejudice which the Protestant denominations had engendered.

And to the churches, too, the Cherokees owe their two political parties. The wisest man in all the nation cannot explain just now how the division came about, but a Baptist preacher by the name of Jones is held responsible. This man Jones will always be remembered, for he was the only white man who could ever master the Cherokee language. He built seminaries and had a hold on the people which made him a power in the nation. As the story goes, Jones was a man of great ambition. Being a white man, he could not be chief, and he had been unable to control John Ross, who was chief for 44 years, or William P. Ross, his nephew, who succeeded him. Up to this time there had been only one party, for the regime of the Ross family had not been questioned. In Louis Downing, a full-blood, Jones saw his opportunity. Jones had with him the confederate element of the Cherokees. Downing had served in the Union army and had distinguished himself as a soldier. Jones promised to make him chief and Downing took with him many of the full-blooded Cherokees who served in the Union army, and a combination was formed with the Confederates which resulted in Downing's election in 1868 as chief. Since that time one of the political parties has borne his name. Downing served for eight years, and, although now dead, his party is still in control of the government. It is the ambition of every man in the nation eligible to the office to be chief. Personal popularity counts for much. There is an election every four years. Every male citizen over the age of 18 is entitled to a vote, and as there is nothing to make a permanent political issue the leadership naturally drifts to the strongest man in the tribe.

The Cherokees are suspicious, and watch their legislator closely. If he makes a mistake he is called to account, and it frequently occurs that the same senatorial district elects one Nationalist and one Downing man to represent it. Dan Smith, a full-blood Cherokee, found out to his sorrow eight years ago that there were some blunders from which a legislator could never recover. Smith was one of the brightest men in the senate, and when a private company asked for the privilege of building a telephone line from Fort Gibson to Tahlequah he was enthusiastically in favor of granting the franchise. He took it upon himself to champion the measure and made enthusiastic speeches in favor of this step toward connecting the nation's capital with civilization. The bill passed, and the work on the telephone line was commenced. But the trouble of the Cherokee legislator had just commenced. He represented the Saline district in the senate, and his people were nearly all full-bloods. Upon his return home he found himself accused of conspiracy to destroy the nation's individuality. The telephone was denounced as an infernal machine for inculcating the pernicious practices of the whites, and a candidate was brought forth against him who was in full sympathy with the people. Smith was charged with attempting to impose on the credulity of his constituents, and he was snowed under by an overwhelming majority.

SILK FROM WOOD PULP.

A Novel Substitute for the Silkworm's Product.

The fact that the United States has not achieved a striking success in the attempts which have been made to introduce silk worm culture in this country is practically admitted to-day. A few scattered efforts have shown some indications of success, but for the most part the silkworm finds fault with his food or the climate. Perhaps because of the apparent impossibility of producing a large supply of raw silk the American manufacturers of that article have not fairly equalled those of France, except within a few very recent years. To-day it can be said, however, that Maine produces as fine an article of "broad" silk goods as any French manufacturing centre can show, if impartial judges are to be believed. The American ribbons also are practically as good as those imported from France. The American and French manufacturers buy much of their raw silk in the same market, and the Americans are using as good machinery and as skilled labor as their French competitors employ.

It is therefore worthy of note at this, the best period of American silk manufacture so far, that a method of making silk threads from wood pulp is being brought to a practical stage. The method made its first public appearance at the Paris exposition of 1889, where it at once attracted attention. At that time, however, it was imperfect, if not absolutely dangerous. Since that date the improvements in the original method have been noticeable, and the revised process is now employed at Besancon, where the silk is being manufactured. The material employed is nothing more than the "wood pulp" which is already used so largely in paper-making. After being crushed the pulp is dried in an oven and afterward immersed in a nitro-sulphuric acid mixture. The pulp is then thoroughly washed in water, and is finally dried in alcohol. The resultant produced is put in a mixture of practically pure alcohol and ether until a "collodion" is formed, not noticeably different from that used for photographic films. After the collodion is prepared it is forced through a filter and is then poured into a long tube, in the side of which there are hundreds of spigots with a very minute outlet. The collodion issues from the spigots in thin, sticky threads, which are afterwards washed by ammonia and water. This washing takes the soluble ether and alcohol from the collodion, which immediately grows harder and tough and in about every respect as brilliant and as strong as silk thread. The resultant threads are spun together in strands of six, and are then ready for weaving.

When the Chardonnet process was first exhibited one very strong objection to the textiles woven from the new "silk" lay in the great inflammability of such a texture. The original combustibility was at the rate of two centimeters a second, and it was claimed with much justice that goods of such a nature could not be used for purposes of dress. The addition of ammonia to the water bath in which the collodion thread was washed served to do away with the objection. Still again it was found that the pressure on the collodion tube was not equal throughout, some of the threads snapping off before they were put into the final bath. It is announced that this fault has been corrected under the revised process and, if the announcement is authentic, the new method of producing silk without silk worms will attract the notice of American manufacturers.

The importance of this invention, if it can be shown to be all that is claimed, may be inferred from the progress which has been made in the paper trade since the advent of the wood pulp processes. The growth of the paper-making industry is well realized in this section, where its rapid advance was so noticeable. With the skill which the American manufacturers have already shown in the silk industry, the advent of a wood pulp process may result in a similar triumph for American industries. If, as it is to be expected, the results of the Chardonnet process are to be on exhibition at Chicago, they will be closely scrutinized by American manufacturers generally.—Boston Advertiser.

Strong Nerves!
A Healthy Body!
A Clear Mind!

The Man Who Possesses Such Is Happy!

The business or professional man who has weak nerves, an unhealthy body, and a cloudy mind and brain, has very little chance of success in life. He is handicapped when he attempts to compete with his healthy and vigorous neighbor.

As a rule we find that the curse of humanity, dyspepsia, is the cause of the trouble. Dyspeptic men are constant grumblers—they are never of an amiable disposition. Some men are nervous, sleepless, bilious and rheumatic; such mortals have terrible weights to clog their onward progress in life.

There is hope and sweet comfort for all such individuals. We know of scores of men who have liberated themselves from bondage by the use of Paine's Celery Compound, that great and wonderful nerve strengthener and flesh builder. Weak nerves are made strong, the clouded mind and brain is made clear, and an abundance of bodily strength is given by that great specific Paine's Celery Compound.

(Nelson Miner.)

Mr. Grady and his partners have struck it richer than ever.

A weekly paper will shortly be started at Lardo, the first number to be printed in Kaslo.

Jap King located a claim above the Grady's group, which is said to be a big thing.

Several wan, pale-faced men are about Three Forks. They are wildcat locators whose occupation is gone.

Carpenter creek is rising fast. The Government bridges will certainly be carried away unless they are raised.

Alexander Ross has been working on his Richmond and Eureka. These claims are on the Slocan Star lead and look firstrate.

Three Forks hotel is nearly finished and will be ready for occupation in a few days. A correspondent reports a whiskey famine in the mountain district.

"Little Sammy" and his partners are quite jubilant over their Cumberland strike—eighteen inches of the very best ore showing in a 90-foot tunnel. There is consequent chagrin on the faces of some capitalists who had an option on the Cumberland at $22,000.

Dr. Titus expects to have his railway hospital tent in position during the next few days. The site has not yet been chosen, but it will probably be somewhere near the park. The doctor does not expect to handle many cases except those resulting from accidents, as this is an unusually healthy climate.

Several prominent railroad officials are becoming interested in this section and have made personal investments in mining properties. As they are in a position to become possessed of inside facts regarding intended moves in their line, the above is, to say the least, significant.

The steel cantilever bridge over the Pend d'Oreille river will be completed by the middle of July. All the steel required in the construction is now on cars between Colville and Northport, and tracklaying is being pushed from Northport to the boundary, and will be up to the bridge in two or three weeks at the outside, probably sooner.

It is very difficult to form any correct idea at present of where the most important points in the Lardo country are located. The country as a whole is rich in mineral. Mining men express themselves as delighted with what they can see of it so far. It is attracting great attention this year, and in point of accessibility is marked out as the next district after the Slocan to be opened up. It is therefore a good country to get into on the ground floor.

Miners are rushing to the new find at Eight Mile creek. There is much excitement at Duncan City. The ore that Frank McGuire is showing around looks very much like the Bluebird or Washington ores in the Slocan. McGuire reports a strong lead. Perry's survey party disbanded, cook and all, except the Blandys and Albert Wylde, and lit out for the new Eldorado. There will be a go-as-you-please rush when the news reaches Kaslo and Nelson.

(Kaslo Examiner.)

The Tiger, an extension of the Best, runs 300 ounces.

The Chambers mine has 28 feet of concentrating ore.

There are a few reasons why a wagon road should be built this summer up the Lardo river.

The Kemp mineral springs are getting to be quite a place of resort; 183 persons visited them last Sunday.

Huge chunks of solid ore, weighing over a ton, have been barred out of the Blue Bird. The Blue Bird has a tunnel started with a five-foot face of ore.

T. S. Walker, a mining expert, arrived in Kaslo on the 24th and will proceed to explore some of the Selkirk prospects, in the interests of Tacoma capitalists.

At the Blue Bird they have some wonderfully rich ore, any sack of which will average from 175 to 200 pounds. They have now about 800 sacks on the dump ready for shipment.

The Washington continues to unfold her treasures and now has from four to five feet of the ledge stripped for 100 feet. In the breast of the tunnel it shows 10 inches of solid, clean ore.

The Idaho, an extension of the Blue Bird, has resumed work. This mine has one foot of lead soft carbonates and two feet of clean ore, and will undoubtedly develop itno an immense property.

Kaslo's jail and record office will be completed in about three weeks. It is situated near the east end of D avenue, close to the river. The dimensions are 34x36 feet, one story, and contains five cells, 6 1-2x5 1-2 each.

S. J. Atkins, an experienced mining man from Duluth, Minn., arrived in Kaslo this week. Mr. Atkins has several mining interests in Slocan, and intends making more purchases and proceed to mine and develop the same.

Even at the present time Trout Lake is justifying its name. The fish are legion, and fresh fish for the catching of them are the order of the day. Between 50 and 60 pounds were caught by one man in one day at the foot of the lake.

The Myrtle R, between the Whitewater and the Wellington, now under bond, is showing up in great shape as development work progresses, showing a 5-foot ledge, assaying from 75 to 200 ounces silver, 35 to 60 per cent. lead; has about ten tons of rich, clean ore on the dump.

Healey creek is a disappointment; so much has been said of its advantages as a route into the mines that one expects to see a large creek and something of a pass. There is neither. Healey creek is a diminutive rivulet, and pours out of the mountain side through a canyon which is as deep as its sides are precipitous.

The Dublin Queen, on Jackson creek, one and a half miles from the Blue Bird, is another bonanza in the list of many. It now shows ten feet in on the ledge, four feet of clean ore and two feet of concentrating ore, exposed for 100 feet, assaying from 60 to 140 ounces in silver. The ledge is also exposed in the bottom of the creek, showing a four-foot body of solid, clean ore.

The Jackson mine, on Jackson creek, owned by Dr. Kilbourne, of Seattle, is one of Slocan's best producers. Tunnel No. 1 is in 100 feet, the face showing two feet of clean ore, which goes 100 ounces silver and about 60 per cent. lead. A continued ore shute facilitates the working of the mine. The Jackson has produced 200 tons already and is in good working condition.

John McGuigan says of the Noble Five group of mines: "The tunnel is in 200 feet and the face of the drift is in five feet of pay ore and the mine never looked better. They have 300 tons of ore on the dump that will average 200 ounces of silver per ton; will commence shipping ore as soon as the waggon road is repaired, the intention being to pack the ore from the mines to Campbell's camp and thence to Kaslo by wagons.

One of the claims which is attracting much attention lately is the Snow Bird, and it is probably because of the remarkable fact of there being such a large proportion of gold, instead, as has been the rule in this section, of silver. We understand that development work will be done on this just as soon as the snow has sufficiently disappeared to admit of it, and there is every indication that the owners have a veritable bonanza. Inquiries have recently been made for the purchase of shares in it, but without success in finding sellers.

Reports from the Washington mine are that tunnel No. 1 is now in 260 feet, and two feet of solid, clean ore continues all the way in and widens near the face to eight feet. Back 30 feet from the face of the tunnel is an open slope with four feet of ore at the face; 40 feet from the mouth of tunnel No. 1 is a wing vein in 80 feet, the face of which will average two feet of clean ore. The lower tunnel is in 180 feet. The ore from this mine will average nearly 150 ounces silver and about 60 per cent. lead. Altogether the Washington has shipped 800 tons of ore, and looks better now than ever before.

(Lardo Reporter.)

Stamp mills and concentrators will be in operation in Lardo before the year is out.

The sawmill will be in operation in a few days and immediately thereafter dozens of new buildings will be erected.

The trail up the Lardo is in excellent condition, what few bridges that were washed out by the recent rise in the streams having been repaired.

Fishing is excellent in the lake between town and the mouth of the river. Many fine specimens of salmon trout weighing from 15 to 20 pounds have been caught.

Good leads are being discovered almost every day on the mountain just back of Lardo. The assays on the ore show that it is very rich in silver and carries some gold.

The survey corps of the Columbia & Kootenay railway company have completed the survey of Wilson's addition to Lardo and are now encamped waiting orders before proceeding to Trout lake. The party numbers four men under the charge of Fred Chandler.

William Glover was in town Monday from Pearson's, where he has charge of the crew of men constructing a trail from that point up to Duncan river. He reports that they were pushing work as rapidly as circumstances will permit, and expect to put on more men in a few days.

The steamer Spokane will be changed from an American to a Canadian bottom in a few days. She will cease plying between Kaslo and Bonner's Ferry and confine her business entirely between lake points, running from Lardo to Nelson and stopping at all towns on the lake.

The waters of the Duncan and Lardo rivers have fallen considerably during the past two weeks. Fears were entertained that exceptionally high water would be reached owing to the immense quantities of snow in the mountains, thus preventing the ascension of these streams in boats, but the cool weather of the last few days has retarded the rapid melting of the snow.

The old saw, "a tenderfoot for luck," has come true again. A few days ago a man named Smith arrived at the Great Northern hotel in Lardo from the Trout lake section. He brought with him a small sack evidently containing some heavy material, but the character and quality of the contents he persistently refused to reveal to the curiously inclined who made overtures with that ultimate end in view. Upon his arrival in Kaslo, however, he threw off all reserve and proclaimed to the people that he had found the bonanza lode of the Lardo country, in proof of whoch he exhibited some marvellously rich ore from the mysterious sack. The samples assay high in the precious metals, and if Smith's claims are true he has enough ore where they came from to make him a millionaire. The curious part of the find is the method of discovery. Smith is not a practical prospector himself and scarcely knows a mineral lode from a dioritic dyke; realizing this, he concluded that his best chance lay in "trailing" some prospector who could distinguish quartz from rock salt. He accordingly spotted a couple of them whom he deemed possessed of the required knowledge, and followed them into the rich mineral belt of the country lying east of the north end of Trout lake. While they were discussing the probabilities of true fissure veins in dolomite and arguing the possibility of a trappean horse in the formation of metamorphic rocks, Smith carefully scrutinized every bit of rock they had chipped in their examination. A certain spot where they consulted long and earnestly and made careful examination, but finally passed, was deemed worthy of a little digging by him, and he went to work with such a will that the ledge was soon uncovered from which he claims the rich samples were taken.

It Was His Leg.

According to the San Francisco Examiner, an elderly gentleman dressed in decorous black, and bearing about him an indescribable something that suggested piety as well as gravity, boarded a Sutter street car the other afternoon. There were only four other passengers on the car, all ladies, who looked with approval at this nice, though maimed old gentleman—an approval that was intensified when he drew from his pocket a Pacific Churchman and became absorbed therein. Presently he signed to the conductor and arose. This was a mistake, for when the car came to a standstill the venerable man, having only one leg to depend on, and not having been thoughtful enough to take hold of a strap, was thrown violently backward and sat down on the car floor with a solid 220-pound chug. Excited and sympathetic feminine hands were instantly stretched out to succor him, but the nice old gentleman, gasping for breath, waved them away and said, deprecatingly, ere he made any motion to rise: "Excuse me, ladies, I couldn't help it. It's this — — — leg of mine. If you had one like it you'd understand how I feel."

Making Fun of Prof. Drummond.

Prof. Drummond's latest book—"A City without a Church"—appears to have suggested ideas to over-wearied church-workers which its author never intended. "The mere title of it," said one wearied Dorcas, "is restful." Another lady has intimated to the professor that a fine subject for his next book would be "A Church Without a Collection."

TEA CARGOES COMING.

C.P.R. Clippers Ready to Sail—Reception to the Miowera.

Vancouver, June 7.—The American bark St. Catharines, the first of the C.P.R. tea fleet for 1893, will sail on June 15th from Yokohama for Vancouver. Four others will follow at short intervals.

The Metropolitan Club opened its new rooms last night.

The Board of Trade is actively engaged trying to get up a banquet to the officers and passengers of the steamer Miowera upon her arrival here. The steamer will be escorted into the harbor by the ships of the port, with bands of music. An address will be presented.

Superintendent Abbott, of the C.P.R., has announced that the contract will be let shortly for clearing the Revelstoke and Arrow Lake Railway.

ASSIZES BEGIN.

Murder Cases Adjourned—Another Death From Diphtheria.

New Westminster, June 7.—The assizes opened this morning. Sir M. B. Begbie, C.J., presiding. With him on the bench were Hon. Mr. Wood, late chief justice of the Straits Settlements, and Judge W. N. Bole. The Marshall and Pittendrigh murder cases were laid over till next assizes, and the Beagens were discharged. Only two cases are expected to proceed—Tupper Thompson, seduction; Huston, breaking from the penitentiary and attempted murder.

The child of P. Feeney died last night of diphtheria. Miss Harrison, of Victoria, sister of Mrs. McPhadden, who came up to assist in nursing, last night took the disease.

An Ecclesiastical Dispute.

Dubuque, Ia., June 7.—The meeting of the suffragan bishops of the Roman Catholic diocese of St. Louis, which is being held in this city to-day for the purpose of selecting a candidate for the vacant episcopacy of Concordia, Kan., is exciting more than usual interest in Roman Catholic circles, on account of its having been convened by Bishop Hennessy, of Dubuque, instead of Archbishop Kenrick. The meeting should have been called at St. Louis, but Archbishop Kenrick refused to issue the summons. The cause of the trouble is a diocesan dispute in western Kansas. Bishop Hennessy, of Wichita, helped defray the debt on the episcopal mansion at Concordia, and when he saw an opportunity to purchase a mansion for $18,000 he felt that the priest and people of Concordia should aid him. They refused, and seized the opportunity to demand a separate bishop for Concordia, and the grievance was laid before Archbishop Kenrick, who, being a friend of Archbishop Hennessy, refused to interfere. Rome was appealed to, and the selection of candidates for the bishopric of Concordia was ordered. The priests chose three, but Archbishop Kenrick refused to call a suffragan council to select three other candidates or second the priests' selections, as the church law requires. Cardinal Ledochowsky then ordered the bishop of Dubuque to call the meeting. Archbishop Kenrick has already been several times over-ruled by the Vatican, and this last difference only serves to widen the breach between the venerable prelate of St. Louis and the holy see.

"CANADA BEATS THE WORLD."

The Cheese Exhibit at the Columbian Exposition.

The Chicago Times has this reference to the Canadian cheese exhibit:—Perhaps you think green things won't grow in Canada. If you do, go around to the Canadian pavilion in the agricultural building and learn otherwise. Ontario has a great display of grains and grasses—and peas. Especially strong on peas is the Canadian exhibit. There are all varieties of peas there. C. W. Young, of the Cornwall Freeholder, who is the chief information man for Ontario, says that Ontario raises the bulk of the seed peas used by the big seedsmen of the United States. But Ontario farmers do not confine themselves to peas. Their pavilion—a fine one, too—is tricked out with all manner of grains. People think Ontario cannot raise corn, but there is some as fine corn in the display as may be found even in the Iowa section. The grain has a triple classification; there is a great variety of grain in the straw artistically arranged. Then there are sheaves bound to show how things grow up north, timothy that is six feet high and wheat pretty nearly as tall. But the pride of Ontario is not in the Ontario section. The big cheese, the biggest cheese of them all, is right across the aisle to the west. It is an Ontario cheese, though made at the Dominion Experimental station in Perth, Lanark county. A good deal has been said about this cheese, how much it weighs and how it broke the floor down while it was being put in place. Everybody ought to know by this time that it weighs over eleven tons, but it is not so easy to understand just how big a thing eleven tons of cheese all in one cake may be. Ten thousand cows collaborated on that cheese. Each gave one day's milking. The total weight of the milk used was 207,200 pounds. The cheese is six feet high and 28 feet in circumference. It is worth between $4000 and $5000. The man who made this cheese, J. A. Ruddick of Perth, is exceedingly proud of it. It is his masterpiece. Mr. Ruddick is a slender young man and exceedingly modest withal. He watches with great solicitude over this pride of Ontario. About once in ten days he carefully turns it over. Of course he does not do all this by himself, for the cheese is a trifle bulky. It is encased in a vat of rivetted steel boiler-plate, and this boiler-plate rides on a heavy wide-wheeled truck. There are strong oak uprights, securely braced, on this truck, and between these the huge cheese box is suspended in wrought-iron stirrups. It may be revolved in there by a system of screws. The reason why it has to be turned is because it is a young cheese and is still 'curing.' Mr. Ruddick says twelve of the biggest cheese factories in Ontario contributed the curds to make the cheese. Each factory pressed its contribution slightly, loaded it into cloth-lined milk cans and rushed it by train to Perth. There the cans were dumped into the boiler-plate vat, the curds broken up, and then the pressure of six giant jack screws put on through heavy oak frame work. Everybody who goes to the agricultural building stops to look at this monumental cheese. On one side of it is a high pyramid of Canadian bottled beer, and not far away is an exhibit of crackers—highly enticing combination. An aged person with grey-colored hair, an abundance of beaver hat and aggressively new store clothes stopped to take a look the other day. He appeared as if he might have come from Kokomo, or Monotony water tank, or some such place. He walked carefully around the cheese, spelled out the placard on it, spat vigorously, and said:—'Gosh! Ef the skippers ever get into that thar cheese they'll grow as big as rabbits.' But this is not the only Canadian cheese in sight. It is flanked all about by big and little cheeses. There are six of them that weigh 1000 pounds each. There are cheeses from Quebec, Ontario and the maritime provinces. Canada beats the world on cheese."

NAKUSP & SLOCAN MINES

The Eldorado of British Columbia

All the ore output now assured to Nakusp by the immediate construction of the NAKUSP & SLOCAN RAILWAY, which will start at Nakusp and end at the Forks of Carpenter Creek, directly in the centre of the Slocan Mines.

No Other Route can Possibly Compete

Thirty-five miles of Railway from Nakusp will tap the whole of the Mines of the Slocan District, and the ores are bound to come out BY THE NATURAL GATEWAY, VIA NAKUSP, to the general welfare and prosperity of the Province.

Look at the Map.

A Provincial Railway Charter and subsidy and a Dominion Railway Charter have been obtained for the Nakusp & Slocan Railway, and the Canadian Pacific Co. have entered into an agreement to lease and operate the Railway for 25 years. There can be no doubt as to the importance of NAKUSP, the Gateway of the Slocan Country, either from the North or South, and the principal shipping and distributing point for all the district tributary to Slocan Lake.

Concentrators and Samplers

Now in contemplation, consequent on the definite settlement of the Railway question. The Nakusp & Slocan Railway will be built with a rush right into the heart of the Mines. See Wardner's and other experts' estimates of the production of Slocan Mines in the press. All this now assured is directly tributary to the Nakusp & Slocan Railway.
